Goal for IQ as a WGD Ambassador Genius of the Year:

I have never been someone who has sought fame. However, as a WGD Ambassador and 2022 Genius of the Year, I will incorporate the utilisation of high IQ in upcoming projects, which will benefit millions of people, and seems to become more my life's purpose.

Organisations/Memberships:

WGD, World Intelligence Network, British Mensa, AtlantiQ, Millenija, Logiq, The International High IQ Society, HighIQWorld.

Occupation/Professional Goals:

I am noted as the longest-serving editor of the World Intelligence Network's magazine and have been involved in it since it started in 2010. I rebranded the World Intelligence Networks's Online Edition magazine (WIN ONE) as Phenomenon and this has proven very popular. AtlantiQ High IQ Society's quarterly magazine, Leonardo, has also seen my guiding hand since its inception in June 2010.

I have edited books of profound content and influence on the gifted. I have also written novels and film scripts that I feel will become famous; the themes in them focus on climate change, elaborating on the sense of exploration rekindled these days in the minds of those wishing to promote space travel.

I am proud to have already met other winners of the WGD Genius of the Year title, being Dr Evangelos Katsioulis, Manahel Thabet, Karyn Hunting Peters and Marco Ripà, enriching my life experiences, especially since 2012, when I assisted in organizing the 12th Asia-Pacific Conference on Giftedness held in Dubai. I am a person who mainly looks forward in time and my goals are to benefit society across the globe, especially in ways that accord with a noble sense of equal treatment, respect and an influx of human dignity. I'm confident the next decade will see these realised. I enjoy collaborating with wife Elena towards these. She is truly my soul mate.

Why work with IQ:

Developing humans is my task in life, which is implicit in being a writer, psychometric practitioner and a teacher. This IQ community interests me for all that, both as subjects to nurture, as well as being a resource for gaining guidance and wisdom. I am especially keen to develop factors of intelligence alongside emotional intelligence, plus identify and promote talents which make for better leaders. Aside from the WGD luminaries, my 2012 Dubai conference was also a great opportunity to meet members of the European Council for High Ability, Lianne Hoozeveen and Christian Fischer, both now professors, and the charming Christina Angelidou from Cyprus.

Statement for the World:

The rapidity of change in the world calls for innovation and creativity to further what humans can do for themselves, given that knowledge development, plus the steering of technology, will get ever more complex and significant as the century unfolds. This means that everyone has a responsibility to disseminate knowledge and skills to the best of their ability, and as such, it is to be encouraged and financed across society.
